SECURING CONNECTIONS WITHIN THE LOCAL COMMUNITY:
Rhythmink International, LLC makes donation to local Columbia high schools

COLUMBIA, S.C. - November 16, 2009 - Two local Columbia high school orchestral programs will be able to continue to share their talents with Columbia residents with the help of Rhythmink International, LLC. Rhythmink International, a neurodiagnostic accessories manufacturer, contributed $1,000 to the Lexington 2 School District in support of the Airport and Brookland-Cayce High School Orchestras.

"We are so thankful to have been given this gift by Rhythmink. At a time when education funding is taking a beating, arts programs seem to be most at risk. This gift will allow our program to continue to progress, with students practicing and studying, not selling door to door in order for orchestra to accomplish its goals. Arts programs don't just produce musicians and dancers, they also make better doctors, engineers and people in general. This is an investment, as much as it is a gift, and there are about 80 young people who say 'Thank you!'" said Andrew Preston, Orchestra Director for the Lexington 2 School District.

"It gives me great pleasure, on behalf of Rhythmink International, to make a contribution to the Airport and Brookland-Cayce High School orchestral programs. Andrew Preston is a wonderful teacher and does a fantastic job with his students, shuttling between two schools, so children with innate talent drawn to the performing arts have the opportunity to explore the orchestral landscape and expand their personal musical horizons. His students have gone on to be professional performers, writers and educators. It is our wish, at Rhythmink, to help further and perpetuate that cycle," said Michael O'Leary, Chief Operating Officer of Rhythmink International.
