MEDICAL MANUFACTURER MAKES DONATION TO INTERNATIONAL AID ORGANIZATION

COLUMBIA, S.C. - February 19, 2010 - As part of the international efforts to bring aid to Haiti, Rhythmink and its employees joined together to raise funds for Doctors Without Borders. Rhythmink International, an electrode manufacturing company, wanted to provide assistance to the Haitian people by focusing its donations toward medical aid.

"The amount of devastation caused by the earthquakes in Haiti is unbelievable. As a company within the medical and health care industry, we felt the need to help in any way possible. Rhythmink's two partners, Shawn Regan and Michael O'Leary, have always been supportive of philanthropic activities and this donation is our way of showing our support," said Amanda Rosinski, marketing coordinator at Rhythmink International, LLC.

In the weeks following the disastrous earthquakes, Rhythmink assembled a team and began fundraising efforts. Rhythmink employees contributed individual donations that were later matched by the company. All donations were submitted to the Haiti relief and medical emergency fund established by Doctors Without Borders.

Doctors Without Borders is an international medical humanitarian organization that works within 60 countries to assist individuals in need. Members of the Doctors Without Borders staff have been working diligently to respond to the needs of the Haitian people.
